Proceedings of Congress

WASHINGTON, April 17 .- Sanderson and Power, now the Montana Senators, were in their seats this morning, their seats having been placed on the Republican side since the adjournment yesterday. These desks were first located on the Democratic side after the four new States were admitted, and there they remained until the action of the Senate yesterday seating the Republican contestants. Under the terms of a resolution presented in Executive session yesterday by Hoar, Sanderson and Power were assigned by lot, to the classes of Senators whose terms will expire in 1893 and 1895 respectively.

Senator Cullom to-day presented a petition signed by many citizens of Illinois, Iowa, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Michigan, Colorado, Missouri, Kansas, Arkansas, North Dakota, South Dakota and Washington, praying that lumber, sugar, salt, binding twine and the materials entering into its composition, be admitted free of duty, and that a cut of at least fifty per cent be made in woolen, cotton and linen fab- the women. They then returned to

The Jouse and Senate Republican Caucus Comittees are hopelessly apart on the Elver question. After the last ineffectuar meeting of the joint sub-committees the House contingent reported that the fun committee had failed to agree. Thereupon Walker of Massachusetts addressed the committee, holding that concessions to the extreme silver men had been made, with the understanding that something positive would be achieved; but that, as they had failed to reach an agreement, the House committee should leave it to the modified Windom bill reported by the Coinage Committee. This was put as a motion, which prevailed-10 to 5. The next step will be to report to the House Republican caucus, probably about Monday night. The indications are that the caucus will accept the House committee bill, and that it will Livery and Feed Stable. pass the House. Meanwhile the Senate will probably pass its bill, and the matter be turned over to the Conference Committee.

The House Committee on Rivers and Harbors to-day completed its appropriation bill. The total appropriation is a little over $20,000,000.

A Gloomy Outlook.

NEW ORLEANS, April 16 .- Reports state that the Mississippi river has anything. risen fifteen points during the last twenty-four hours at all stations between Vicksburg and Baton Rouge. How we are going to escape the seeming watery fate is now the all-absorbing question.

Large numbers of deer, driven out of the swamps for sixty miles from the Nita crevasse to this section, are running all over the vegetable farms, burned, and seven servants were eating young vegetables and corn.

Will Go to Europe

Washington, April 16. - Justice Stephen J. Field, who has been ill for a day or two past, informs the agent of the California Associated Press that he will not return to California this A Train Ditched at year, but will spend the summer in Europe. He says: "For fifteen consecutive years I have been going yearly to California to hold Circuit Court, and I feel the need of rest. Be- COTTON side that, I do not find it quite agreeable going every year. I must, of course, render my judgments, which, while it makes many friends, must also make many enemies. It wears on one in time to follow it up for consecutive years, when we are required by law to go but once in two years. Between the praise of litigants who are awarded suits and the criticisms of those who lose, the situation becomes trying, consequently I think I shall take a short season to myself." It is generally understood here that Justice Sawyer will resign his position on the bench within a very short time. He is on his way here, and will consult with the President regarding his successor.

San Francisco Ruffiaus.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 16.-Four men, named Frank White, James O'Brien, James McCluskey and Matthew Sullivan, were arrested last night on charges of robbery and battery, and will probably have to serve long terms in prison. Monday they visited a resort on the Mission road, and after terrorizing the proprietor and compelling him to give them liquor, they went to the milk ranch of August Huber, who was alone in the House with his wife and a servant girl. The men broke into the house by knocking down the front door, and after beating Huber into a state of insensibility, they subjected the women to shameless treatment, though they were driven away by hired men before they accomplished their avowed purpose with regard to the saloon, where they robbed a barber and a carpenter of their money, Passenger Train Ditched. Special to the GAZETTE.

San Francisco, April 17.-Information is received here that a passenger train on the Southern Pacific Railroad jumped the track two miles porth of Tehachapi this morning, and that eleven cars were ditched. The engineer lost control of the air brakes and the train rushed down the grade at a fearful rate until near the scene of the frightful calamity of several years ago, where it left the track. It is reported that no one was fatally injured.

LATER.-Superintendent Fillmore of the Southern Pacific states that his advices are to the effect that only four or five of the eleven coaches were de railed, and that there is no report of any loss of life or injury to passengers. He says the only damage is in breaking of the trucks of the coaches which jumped the track. The accident occurred three and a half miles north of Girard Station. The train left Los Angeles at 10:40 last night and was due here this evening, and, as it is reported as only one hour behind time, it is supposed that it was made up again after the accident and has started for this city.

TEHACHAPI, Cal., April 17.-The few persons who were injured in the accident this morning were afterwards brought here. Mrs. C. W. Johnson of Los Angeles, it is thought, is suffering from a concussion of the spine, but the injuries of the others are very slight. The accident happened at an early hour, while the passengers were asleep. Ten cars were derailed.

Free Trade in Iowa.

Charles M. Garman of Des Moines county, Iowa, who knows by practical experience all about the condition of farms and farmers in that State, writes:

In 1846 (free trade period), as my books show, we got only 10, 12 1-2 and 15 cents for corn, and wheat in proportion. I remember selling hogs in Schenck & Denise's pork house in this city (Burlington) for $1 50 per hundred net. Sometimes I would have to stay in town, pay a hotel bill, and take my turn while the hogs were weighed and slaughtered. Sales were made in this city to-day for $3 60 per hundred gross. Every practical farmer knows the difference between $1 50 net and $3 60 gross. I remember seeing Joab Comstock hauling wheat into town with an ox team and selling it for 37 1-2 cents a bushel. That was in 1846.

Now, that would not have been so bad if we could have bought everything we wanted as cheap in proportion; but, unfortunately for us, that was not the case. We had to pay $3 a barrel for salt, which we can buy now for $1 20 to $1 30. A farm wagon cost $140. We can buy now a much better wagon for cheaper. A dozen files, for instance, can be bought now for the price which we then paid for one. That was not an exceptional case by any means, but all along through these years prior to the adoption of the protective tariff in 1861 there was not any great opportunity for farmers to make money. We had to pay $50 to $60 for a good overcoat, which can now be bought for $15 to $20, and nobody ever imagined that a good suit of clothes could be bought for $10.

With the development of our manufactures in this country and a diversity of industries an immense amount of farm products is now raised for which there was then no market. And the rates of interest are much lower now than then. I remember paying as high as 22 per cent. before the war, but money can now be had for from 6 to 8 per cent. We used to pay $250 or $300 for a harvester; now we can buy one with binder complete for $100. So it was at every point where the interest of the farm is touched. We can get better prices for our products and we pay less for what we buy. Occasionally there is an article, like sugar, that is an exception to this. We sometimes bought sugar as cheap as now, but it was not as good a quality, mostly common brown sugar.

Then there is another thing to be considered. Farmers now buy a great many things that in those days were unthought of, or would have been looked upon as luxuries and extravagance. Our houses now have carpets and furniture, and a great many conveniences that we could not have afforded in the days of low tariff. We dress better, we have better houses, they are better furnished. We have Si-rra Chemical Co., San Francisco. better farm implements. We have a great many comforts that were not enjoyed by the pioneer farmer. These things, of course, cost money. If we would live as plain now as in those days and do as little for schools and churches and for the requirements of social life, we could probably put more money in the savings-banks than we do now. But the modern farmer is intelligent and progressive, and wants to keep abreast of the times He is a reading man and takes a list of newspapers and magazines that in the days of low tariff would have appalled him by their expense-Every farm house has its little library. The prosperous farmer keeps his family carriage, and in a multitude of ways he indulges in expenditures that he would not have thought of in the days of low tariff.

THE Bald-Knobbers, who recently revived their night-riding in Carter county, Mo., have come to grief. Two of them were killed by the fourteen-year-old son of one of their victims. A few such boys in a White Cap neighborhood would exercise a powerful influence in favor of law and order.

His arm swelled terri-That year we got 10 cents for corn bly, causing great agony; physicians said the arm must be amputated, and even then his recovery would be doubtful. One day I read about a blood purifier, new to me, and was surpised to learn that it was prepared by C. I. Hood, with whom I used to go to school in Chelsea, Vt. I decided to have my boy try Hood's Sarsaparilla, and was much gratified when it seemed to help him. Luminous Fountains.

For several months past the Grand Hotel at Paris has transformed its fountain in the courtyard, where celebrities of all nations are wont to congregate, into a luminous fountain, flashing at night with all sorts of varied colors. A rich Parisian, M. Gaston Menier, has fitted up one of these fountains on his dining table, the works of which are smothered in a huge bouquet—a tasteful and novel addition to the enjoyment of a dinner.

Wanted a Ladder Let Down

The majority of the doom-sealers who skipped out from Oakland and San Francisco halted when they reached Santa Rosa, Vacaville and other foothill towns, but the colored people among them never stopped going until they reached the apex of Mount St. Helena. Even when at the top of the peak they were still looking about for something to climb, and one colored brother earnestly called upon the Lord to "let down a ladder."

USEFUL INFORMATION.

Tilbury Fox, M. D., the eminent medical writer, in his work "Skin Diseases," thus ac counts for the pimples so common to the face and neck. Eating too rich or too greasy ood, or too hearty eating while the excretory organs are sluggish, causes in most people indigestion or a dyspepsial condition, which causes the blood to move sluggishly, and enfeebles the pores. The result is, that ne block in the poces, the exuding secreti which inflame, each distinct inflammation being a pimple. Dr. Fox therefore does not prescribe "blood purifiers" so called, but a dyspepsia cure" to be taken, to use his own words "till the dyspensial symptoms have disappeared." The old idea was, that face eruptions were caused by a "humor in the blood," for which they treate . the blood giving the mineral, potash. Joy's Vegetable Fox, and aims with gentle vegetable alteratives at the stomach and digestive organs. The reason is apparent why it cures dyspepsia and indigestion, and the pimples a skin eruptions which result therefrom and why sarsaparillas that use minerals fail.

A NIGHT OF DANGER.

Thrilling Adventure of a Traveler in a Southern Forest.

There was no longer any reasonable doubt but that I was lost.

All that day I had been tramping through a wild and almost unbroken forest, in one of our Southwestern States. Since morning, I had not seen more than a half-dozen human habitations, and they were of the poorest and rudest description, hardly fit for the abode of a wild animal. Since the middle of the afternoon, the forest had been unbroken on either side, so thickly matted with trees and vines that the eye could not penetrate a dozen feet into the gloomy shadows.

All there was to show that a human being had ever been that way before was the apology for a road that I was pursuing. If there had ever been any travel upon it, there was little sign now that such had been the case. Bushes had grown up where the ruts might have been, and in many places the stout vines had crept around, so that one had to keep a constant lookout to prevent himself from being tripped up by them.

Now and then, in the thickest portion of the forest, it was almost impossible to keep what, in fact, was hardly more than a trail. Here it would seem to branch either to the right or left, but up to nightfall I flattered myself that I had not gone astray. But now I had grave reason-to be worried.

At the cabin where I had passed the previous night, I had been told that I should come to another by the middle of the afternoon, or a little later, providing I made good time. But now night was close upon me, and the habitation I had been looking for at every turn had failed to materialize.

The prospect of a night alone in the ismal forest was not pleasant to con aplate. I knew that in the dismal onthe shout me, outlaws, moonshiners and cut-throats had their refuge, and I did not relish the idea of meeting them at any time, much less of encountering them in the darkness. It had begun to grow dark about me, when I came to a point in the way which puzzled me. The road forked again, and for the life of me I could not determine which to take, the right or

As many had done before me, I let chance decide the matter. Setting a stick upright, I removed my hand, and let it fall in the direction it would. It fell to the left, and so I took that way.

I hurried onward now as fast as I could. I wanted to make use of what daylight still remained, and get to the cabin where I was to pass the night before it became so dark that traveling would be impossible. But my haste amounted to nothing. A darkness which could almost be felt closed in about me, and I felt a certainty that I must be lost. The cabin I expected to find had not appeared, and of its existence I had no reason to doubt. The people where I had passed the previous night could have had no motive in deceiving me. Stumbling along in the darkness. trying to make up my mind to face the inevitable, that of passing the night out of doors, I suddenly tripped over something which lay across the path, and went headlong over it to the ground. Mingled with the shock of striking the earth was a thrill of fear, coupled with astonishment. I did not get upon my feet at once, but sitting up, I reached out toward the obstruction over which I had tripped. A thrill of horror ran through my frame as my hand touched it. It was the body of a man. I sprang to my feet, while I could feel the hair rising upon my head. Had the body been stiff and cold, my fright would not have been so bad. By chance I had placed my hand upon its face, and I felt there was the warmth of life still in it. This was not all. It was wet, and the moisture stuck to my hands. Although I could not see, I felt sure that it was blood that was sticking to them. An accident had occurred, or a murder had been committed, within a few minutes

With trembling hands I sought for a match, and when I found one, I struck it and glanced down at the object before me. It was the body of a man, its face so covered with blood that its features were not discernible. The match went out and I was alone again in the darkness, with the body of the murdered man lying at my feet.

I lighted two or three matches at once, but their light only revealed to me what I had already seen. What could I do? The thought of remaining by the side of the dead man until morning I could not entertain for a moment. I must ge on until a considerable distance, at least, was placed between it and me. This I lost no time in doing. As fast as my feet would carry me, I hurried on, half unmindful if I was keeping the For something like half an hour I pushed onward, and then came suddenly to a standstill. On before me a light was glimmering through the trees; but I was uncertain whether it came from a fire or a will-o'- the-wisp flitting through the tangled mazes of the forest. But I would not be long kept in suspense. Any company was better than the dead man lying in the road behind me. As I came near, the outlines of a cabin disclosed itself, and out through the single window the light was gleaming.

I thanked my stars for this; without doubt it was the cabin to which I had been directed that morning; and I hadstumbled as it were upon it by accident. The thought of finding those who had a costly, but unbecoming. A bright band in the death of the man I had left in the road did not occur to me, and she said to ferself: "There's a mother walking up to the door. walking up to the door, I gave a loud rap thereon. Some one commenced to move about. The light was taken from the window, and, a little later, the door was thrown open, and a woman stood before me. She was not very prepossessing, and there was a scared look upon her face, as she said:

"Who are you, and wast do you want

"I am a stranger traveling through the country on business. This morning I was told I should find a cabin hereabouts, where I could get entertainment for the night."

"You had better go away. This is no place for an honest man. They may be back soon, and your life will be in dan-

She would have closed the door, but I raised my hand to prevent it. At that noment she uttered a cry of terror. "What is it?" I said.

"Murderer! Look at your hands,"

I held them up. They were covered with blood which I had got upon them while feeling in the dark to find what it was that lay across the road. The blood of the murdered man.

The next moment she had slammed the door in my face, and then I heard her secure it with heavy burs.

A man could hardly find himself in a more forlorn condition than that I was now in. No road which a man could follow before him; a dead man lying in the forest behind, and a band of cutthroats liable at any moment to put in their appearance at the cabin.

The sound of running water put me in mind that there was a chance for me to wash the blood from my hands. Guided by the sound, I passed around the cabin to the spot where, doubtless, its inmates got their water. Here I proceeded to give them a good washing, although in the darkness I could not tell whether A had removed all the stains. I was about to move away from the spot, when I was startled by the sound of voices hardly a dozen yards away. Listening, I caught the words uttered as they drew nearer:

"Let him lie there and rot. An aboveground grave is good enough for a dog

Doubtless he was speaking of the man over whose body I had stumbled. "But some one may find it, and so get us into trouble," said another.

"There is little chance of that. No one hardly ever comes this way now." "You forget that there is a stranger somewhere near here now. We have got to see that he don't get out of here alive. My blood ran cold. Of course he could mean no one except myself.

"Yes, he has seen too much already. If he came along the road he must have run across the dead man. Who knows. but what he may be in the cabin now? He would want a shelter for the night. and the light in the window might bring him here.

They had reached the doorway now, and one of them demanded admittance. The door opened, and they went in, closing it behind them. Now was the time for me to make my escape. A minute later they might learn of the woman that I must be somewhere near at hand. Almost holding my breath. and moving so that not a dry leaf rustled beneath my feet, I crept away into the darkness, going I knew not whither.

To my dying day I shall not forget that night in the forest. Morning found me more dead than alfve; but to my great joy it was on the edge of a considerable town. I at once sought out the authorities, and told them the story of my night's adventure. They-knew of the whereabouts of the cabin, and had long suspected it to be the home of a gang of robbers and moonshiners. When they got there, they found it empty. Taking alarm at my escape, fearing that I had learned too much, they had fled to new quarters for safety. The body of the murdered man was brought in and buried. Who he was was suspected that he was some one who was trying to earn the reward offered for a clew to the gang of moonshiners by whom he had lost his life. A few years afterwards, I heard that me with a merry twinkle in his eyes, they had been caught and had paid the his round, ruddy face all aglow with anpenalty of their crimes at the halter's

Every now and then that night of danger comes vividly to my mind, and I reverently thank Providence, who carried me safely through.-Arthur L. Meserve, in Yankee Blade.

A Five-Dollar Equine.

A very good and true story is reported with Prof. Marsh in the title role, says the New Haven Palladium. While walking on Prospect street near his home not long ago he remarked a horse attached to a dilapidated ash-wagon driven by an aged negro, which animal had on its leg a queer bone formation. The professor stopped the team, made a cursory examination of the pro-tuberance and concluded the interview ty saying in a half-joking way that when the horse died be would like that leg for scientific examination and would give five dollars for the same delivered to his house. A couple of hours later on his return home he found a long. awkward bundle at his front door on the veranda, and it required no careful examination to reveal the leg of a horse. "You see, sah," the owner of the ashwagon remarked, with a peculiar look in his eye, "de old horse he died."

An Unfortunate Remark.

Bagley-"How's that pretty little widow in Harlem that you've been ravwidow in Harlem that you've been rav-ing about lately?" Bailey—"Oh, she's married." Bagley—"You don't seem to have very much luck in your matri-monial ventures, do you, Bailey?" Bailey—"Oh, I don't know. You see I'm the one she married."

SMART GIRL THIS.

How a Gotham Maiden Invented a Pleasant and Lucrative Occupation.

A clever girl who loves children and has the soul of an artist has opened a new avocation for herself and other maidens who need money, says the New York Sun. This girl recently saw a beautiful child of four years, sitting in a carriage with his mother, in front of a shop. But, alas! The boy's beauty was almost concealed by a dowdy costume, who does not know how to dress her child. Why not design a costume for him and send it to her?" She ascertained who the woman was and went home and originated the cutest little suit that mortal ever dreamed of. This design she sent to the mother, explaining that it would not be sold elsewhere should she purchase it. The girl had sense enough to ask a good price, as the woman fancied both the idea and the design. Since that first step was taken the girl has progressed rapidly. Now she has as regular patrons some of the wealthiest and most influential women in New York. When they wish new clothing for their children, as they do every few weeks, they drop a note to the oung women, telling her to design a rock for school, orafternoon, or a party dress. Thereupon the artist makes an appointment, goes to see the child, studies its form and features, makes a few notes and in a day or two submits er design. She frequently buys the naterials, thus obtaining the commisionaire's percentage from the shopcepers. She reads fashion papers, aunts stores which advertise new imortations of dress goods and millinery ad krops her eyes open on the streets. the has gone into the work as a regular usiness and is making an excellent inonie from the novel work.

MARRIED ANOTHER MAN.

A Matrimonial Advertisement That Didn't

Work Just as Intended. An advertisement appeared in the ondon Advertiser a short time ago rom a man residing at Temby Bay, iamed libotson, in which he spoke of his desire to secure a Christian woman as a wife. Among those who read the advertisement was a widow residing at Perth, mother of two children, who answered it. The gentleman wrote a eply, in which he described his house nd worldly goods and explained that he desired some one to take charge of his household. The widow, after some corespondence, purchased a ticket to go to her prospective husband. She did not find things quite as she expected. The nousehold consisted of the father and nine children, the youngest of whom vas seven years of age. The children's nother had aled insane and the charming widow was loth to complete the ransaction which she had begun so ravely. She was stopping at Hilton, ad the widower went thither to interview her, but the lady would not be een at all.

This would be a sad ending were it not that another chapter yet remains to be told. A young man of Temby Bay heard of the lady being there, and that she had two little children, five and eight years old. He had a nice little talk with her Sunday, proposed marriage with her Monday, was accepted, and the wedding took place Tuesday, The widow says she has not made a mistake, even if it was a hasty action, for the young man in question is sober, respected and industrious. At last accounts Mr. Ibbotson was on his way to Bruce mines to meet another Mady who had taken preliminary steps toward matrimony in response to the advertise ment. A FUNNY EPISODE.

Drs. Robert Collyer and Robert Laird Collier in a Street-Car.

Rev. Robert Collyer enjoys a joke immensely, even though it be against himself, says a writer in the Detroit Free Press. Many years ago, when he was pastor of Unity Church in Chicago, a funny incident occurred in which he participated. I was well acquainted with Laird Collier, but had a speaking acquaintance only with the former. There were just three occupants of a streetcar in Chicago, consisting of Dr. Robert Collyer, an unknown gentleman and myself. The stranger remarked to the doctor, as they sat side by side, that he regretted exceedingly leaving the citywhere he had passed a week-without seeing or hearing these two celebrities. especially the Unity Church Collyer. I sat opposite the two gentlemen and saw was never known to a certainty, but it there was fun ahead. Dr. Collyer bowed politely as he recognized me. Finally the stranger asked the doctor hisopinion of the two reverends of whom he had heard so much. Dr. Collyer glanced at ticipated fun; but when the querist asked which of the two Collyers he best liked, the situation became irresistible to me, as I feared one or the other of them would leave the car before my time came. "Well." said the renowned Robert, "Laird Collier is a splendid follow, and I like him very much, very much, indeed; but to be honest with you, I confess that I do like Robert the best." I could stand no more, and as I rose to leave the car, and with all the gravity of my nature extinguished, I turned to the stranger saying: "Allow me, sir, to introduce you to Rev. Robert Collyer, of Unity Church." The effect may be more easily imagined than described. Dr. Collyer went into convulsions of laughter, while the stranger was so dazed he could not say a word. Both looked impossible utterances at me, and I fairly staggered under my own laugh-ter as I tried to pass out of that car.

WOMEN AND MICE. The reason why a woman is afraid of a mouse is a profound mystery—indeed, it has never been very clearly proven that she is. But some women are constantly in such a nervous, irritable condition that the slightest thing annoys and startles them. The cause of this unfortunate state of affairs is usually some functional derangement; some distressing or painful irregularity, some derangement or peculiar weakness incident to her sex; or, it may be due to inflammation, ulceration or displacement of some of the polyic vigegra or to ness incident to her sex; or, it may be due to inflammation, ulceration or displacement, of some of the pelvic viscera, or to other organic lesions péculiar to her sex. From whichever cause it may arise, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a poetite remety, so certain in its curative results that its manufacturers sell it, through druggists, under a guarantee of its giving satisfaction in every case, or money paid for it will be promptly refunded. As a soothing and strengthening nervine, "Favorite Prescription" subdues nervous excitability, irritability, exhaustion, prostration, hysteria, spasms and other nervous symptoms attendant upon disease of the womb. It induces refreshing sleep and relieves anxiety and despondency.
